Its simple and easy to use, with an excellent UI and in-built features. It is a popular browser with developers and has an active community of users. Firefox is available to download on a number of devices, including desktop, mobile, tablets, even the Amazon Firestick TV. What are the main features of Mozilla Firefox? Some features include tabbed browsing, spell checking tool, incremental search, live bookmarking, download manager, private browsing, and geolocation. Tabbed browsing makes it easy and quick to work on multiple windows at the same time. The in-built spell check tool is great for writing and content editing. Incremental search gives suggestions and gives back queries that are related to our search. Bookmarking helps us organise the preferred websites more, and Firefox does it efficiently. Firefox offers the feature of Smart Bookmarks, which allows users to visit their most frequently used websites on the toolbar. Geolocation allows the search to show results based on your geographical location, which helps throw up more relevant searches. The download manager organises and shows downloads you make through the browser. Apart from the in-built add-ons, add-ons created by 3rd party developers can also be added to Firefox. Firefox has a Smart Location bar, which not only searches the location of a website through the URL but also searches bookmarks for the page. It tracks the relevant keyword not online the URL. What is Mozilla Firefox compatible with? While it started from Windows, Firefox is now compatible with almost any device and operating system. Available across Windows, iOS and Linux, to be played on desktops, laptops, mobile phones, tablets, and now even on Amazon Firestick, and other smart TVs. Firefox add-ons using an HTML or JavaScript API can be installed into the browser. Firefox supports all the major web standards, HTML, XML, XHTML, CSS, JavaScript, DOM, MathML, SVG, XSLT and XPath. However, Firefox does not support ActiveX, due to security vulnerabilities. It can still be used using third-party add-ons, but they do not work for all versions of Firefox. What are the pros of Mozilla Firefox? Firefox offers high-speed access to the internet, with an efficient interface and customisable settings. Back in 2004, when Firefox was introduced to the world, most windows users were only exposed to Explorer, which was slow and heavy to use. Firefox changed the way we browsed the internet and it remains one of the most popular browsers for Windows users. Also, Firefox has security features in-built and pre-installed, protecting users from security breaches. Spyware and pop-ups are blocked, and there is protection against malware and viruses. Firefox uses "Safe Browsing" as a security protocol, which is developed by Google. Firefox is serious on privacy protection and its safety protocols and add-ons offer optimum protection from privacy breaches. A simple interface, which is not heavily complicated, allows for easy navigation. The choice of add-ons and extensions make for an interesting browsing experience. Add-ons that sync passwords and browser history ensure seamless browsing. A minimalistic interface ensures that it is fast and easy to load the browser which makes starting up the browser rapid. What are the cons of Mozilla Firefox? While Firefox works excellently on a Windows PC, there are several compatibility issues with other operating systems and devices. Not all websites are compatibles with Firefox, and there are some writing tools and CMS for websites that face compatibility issues as well. On mobile too, Firefox is not the first choice for users, as it is not pre-loaded or default on most smartphones. Firefox users also face issues while performing multiple functions. For instance, downloading and browsing on different tabs sometimes results in the browser being hung. The download also doesn't resume automatically and needs to be manually restarted. Also, the Firefox program consumes a lot of space and memory, making the overall performance of the operating system slower at times. What are the alternatives to Mozilla Firefox? Some of the main alternatives to Firefox are Google Chrome, Safari, Microsoft Edge, Thunderbird, or the good old Internet Explorer. Google Chrome is a preferred browser over Firefox since most consumption of content has moved from desktop to mobile, and in Android mobiles, the Google Chrome browser is pre-installed. Also, Chrome allows for syncing across devices and accounts and is extremely well integrated with Google apps. Firefox falters here because mobile users prefer to use a pre-set Chrome or Safari. Unlike Google Chrome, which is fully integrated with the Google Search engine, Firefox is not a search engine but simply a browser, and Google is the default browser. Earlier, the default engine was Yahoo, but it has now switched to Google. The popularity of Google Chrome ensures that most websites are made to accommodate the browser and are designed to work optimally on Chrome, and some websites are not compatible with Firefox. Even though Firefox has a better UI than Safari, the default settings of a Safari browser on mobile phones ensure that it is used more frequently than Firefox. There is also Internet Explorer, which is pre-installed in Windows as the default browser, but it is common knowledge of how slow and heavy the browser is to use. The Bing search engine doesn't help either. Firefox took over the browser market from Internet Explorer way back in the early 2000s, so it is safe to say that Firefox is any day preferred over Internet Explorer. Final Thoughts on Firefox Firefox is an easy to use web browser, with a good UI and add-ons that enhance the experience of browsing. It's minimalistic interface ensure that the browser is light, and has a fast start-up time. However, Firefox is not a preferred browser for mobiles, and with an exceedingly mobile centric approach to developing content and websites, it has fallen behind Google Chrome, which has taken the larger market share. With integration and compatibility issues, Firefox is soon becoming the less preferred option for users. It's not Internet Explorer but then it's also not Google Chrome. We don't have any change log information yet for version 43.0.4 of Mozilla Firefox 64-bit for PC Windows. Sometimes publishers take a little while to make this information available, so please check back in a few days to see if it has been updated. Can you help?
